

Government Jobs Approval Network

Monday, 23 August 2010

We realize there are many avenues for pursuing government jobs, but looking for jobs at yxbbxgz.jetfinishfamiliar.com because you got an email from someone at hadnprobablecharge.com seems kind of risky. The link they want you to visit is insanely long and obscure, and there's just no telling what might happen to you, your identity or your computer by clicking this link based on how it looks. If someone is soliciting you to visit their job board, do a little research before taking the plunge. Better yet, stick with the bigger job boards. At least you know who they are! Spreading your information across too many job boards isn't necessarily going to help your odds. Visiting a questionable site like this one could result in viruses, malware or keyloggers on your computer, destroying your data and then your life.

In the electronic age, you don't have to feel guilty about withholding personal information from people you don't trust. That's what us simple folks calls common sense! ;)
